REPORT OF SEMINAR ON, “CAREER IN SCIENCE AT SES” IN SCIENCE FAIR

AT T.N.T.V SCHOOL

Current situation is like that the children's who pass out from 10th standard have no vision where to go and in which science field they should make their career. Also it is seen that even the students who have opted science in 11th and 12th standard is not having good confidence that they will succeed and will further make their career in different field of Science. Considering that aspect SES Chairman has put faith in us and had given us a liberty to prepare one presentation on, “Career in Science at SES”. His vision is to cover all the Colleges of Science of SES and focus the entire different fields which one can opt within our SES campus and make their career. Prof. Niket Shastri of Physics dept and Dr. Mayank M Dalal, Dean SAWC has prepared the presentation with the help of different colleges of science of SES and further was presented in front of students and the parents who visits the Science Fair organized at T & T V Sarvajanik High School under the banner of Sarvajanik Education Society from 13th to 16th August 2015. This was further well co-ordinated by students of our college.

The same presentation run for all the four days in Room No: 31 of T & TV High School from 13th to 16th August 2015.

FRANDORE BLOGGER PRIZE 2015

This is to hereby inform you that Vishvaraj Chauhan, a third year, Chemical Engineering student of Sarvajanic College of Engineering & Technology, Surat has won the Frandore Blogger Prize 2015, which is an annual blog writing prize held in November every year. The prize is handed out by writer J. P. Rambling - a writer himself and the author of the novel 'A Different Class' - to honour the memory of his parents.

Vishvaraj had been writing his blog since April 2015, and sorts out his posts into three categories - Musings, Rants and Specials. In his own words, he says his blog is "a mere collection of thoughts". The posts are a combination of philosophies and understandings. He writes once every month. The blog, named Halfway To Asphodel has seen unprecedented success which is an indication of the quality of the posts. It had amassed more than 1000 views by the end of 6 months, and currently has about 113 dedicated followers.

Chauhan had entered his post for November 2015, 'An Ambiguous Balancing Act' into the 'All Else' category of the Frandore Prize 2015. The results of the competition were announced on 28 November 2015, and Chauhan's post was deemed to be the winner in his category. He receives a Prize Amount of 100 USD.

Frandore Prize Results 2015

This year was quite poor in the number of entries for the Frandore Prize. It was not really surprising the numbers were fewer than previously due to my long absence from blogging and the promotion for the competition was largely on Twitter.

With so much going on I am closing the competition 2 days early and announcing the winners today. The prizes are $100 in each category. This will be awarded on the 4th of December. The prize money will either be paid via PayPal or alternately $100 worth of Amazon vouchers will be issued. Failing either of these methods of payment the prize money will be awarded to a nominated charity (proof of payment will be published). So who are the winners?

In the comedy section the winning entry goes to blogger 'Lily' with an amusing entry on the observations of male weakness. I wasn't going to pick this one entitled but I'm too scared not to. Congratulations Lily you won at a canter - there was only one other entry in this category :P

In the second category 'All Else' there were a few more entries but once again the numbers were down considerably on previous years. This winner is also a wordpress entry. Congratulations to Visharaj for his post

an-ambiguous-balancing-act

an astute observation on balance.

Thank you to all entrants and better luck next year when I intend doubling the prize money.
